AT REST.

The Prince Consort Borne to the Tomb.

ORDER OF THE PROCESSION

Scenes in the Palace and the Royal

Sunday, the sixth of September, the day fixed for the burial of John O. Dominis, the Prince Consort, dawned well-known hymn "My faith looks up fair and cloudless. The morning was to thee." warm, but as the hour of noon apotherwise would have been sultry. The preliminary service was held as announced at half past twelve in the Throne Room of the Palace, and as the time fixed drew near, the notables of the Kingdom-Princes, Judges, Members of the Privy Council, the representatives of friendly states - gathered to pay the last earthly bonors to the deceased. The coffin of the Prince Consort was placed in the centre of the Throne Room upon a raised foundation covered below by a cloth of blue satin and above by a rich yellow robe. Upon the latter rested the coffin itself, and over it was thrown a heavy mantle with broad alternate bands of red and yellow feathers. The coffin itself is a magnificent piece of work from the shops of C. E. Williams, sounded and the solemn procession made entirely of kou and koa, the body | wended its slow way along King street being of the latter, and the trim- and up Nuuanu avenue to the Mausomings of the former wood. It contains more than two hundred pieces in all and the sides and ends were magnificent specimens of Hawaiian wood. The plate, a fine piece of artistic work, came from Hubash. It is a piece of solid silver about ten inches long in the shape of a lyre. At the top was the Hawaijan cost-of-arms raised and done in colors, surmounted by a crown. At the bottom was placed a Masonic emblem also in colors, and between these two decorations was engraved the inscription surmounted by a wreath of green gold. The inscription is as follows:

His Royal Highness the Prince Consort JOHN OWEN DOMINIS.

The Beloved Husband Her Majesty QUEEN LILIUOKALANI. Knight Grand Cross of the Royal Order of Kamehameha. Knight Grand Cross of the Royal Order of Kalakaua, Knight Grand Cross of the Royal Order of The Crown of Hawaii,

Member of the Privy Council of State, Governor of the Island of Oahu Commarder of the Forces. Born March 10th, 1832.

Died March 27th, 1891. At each of the four corners of the bier were placed embroidered cushion on which rested emblems of earthly pride and honor-it the head the sword and hat of the Governor of Oahu, and those of one high in rank among the Knight Templars-at the foot Hawaiian and foreign orders and decorations. On each side of the princely bier stood five Fawaiians wearing on their shoulders the short feathered cloaks which consitute the emblem of their office, and waved their small kahilis with the strange slow motion peculiarly characteristic of royal obsequies in Hawaii. The four corners were occupied by Majors Boyd, Cornwell, Bertelmans and Holt, the personal staff of the Governor of Oahu, clothed in full uniforms and belimeted in nodding

Through a pilgrimage of woe. This concluded the service, which was of the most solemn and grand character throughout. The brethren retired from the mausoleum immediately after the singing of the hymn. Three volleys were fired by the household troops. Her Majesty remained alone in the mausoleum filteen minutes after the Masonic service was over, and the doors of the building were closed on the dead a few minutes later. Headed by the band, the military and firemen marched back to town.

FROM THE VOLCANO.

A Lady's Description of the Surroundings. From a private letter written to a friend in this city by a lady from California, we cull some extracts of Volcano Hotel, August, 1891. I have been here now some time, and I can truly say that I have never been in a place better adapted for an invalid to recruit than this. My time has been most agreeably spent in reading, writing, and in pleasant walks to the woods and to Kilauea-iki, when the weather permits. Just now the ohelo berries are ripe, and everywhere we go, they are abundant, and serve for the table, fresh or stewed. We never tire picking or eating them. The days pass quickly without the time hanging, as it often does in out-of-the-way places; and I assure you this is one of the best retreats for a person to come to, who seeks rest from nervous prostration, or from overwork. This is a perfectly charming day, warm but not hot; the sky a beautiful blue, with a few small clouds skimming over Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea, and casting their shadows on the mountain side. The crater is very active, and on cloudy nights, when the pit is covered with heavy clouds, the reflection of the fires upon the clouds makes everything around the crater weird-like and awful, and as we view the scene from the veranda of our hotel, it seems as if the whole island was on fire. It is a truly grand and wonderful sight, beyond conception, until it has been seen. And it is a scene which can never be forgotten, after it has once been witnessed. The hotel is nearing completion, but the carpenters and painters are still at work on the main building, and after it s finished, they have the old hotel, the stables and the baths to complete, so it will take till October 1st to finish the work. Numerous parties have been here during this month, some going and coming atmost every day, which gives life to he place. You can get some idea of this when I state that the hotel has had no less than 142 visitors during the past month. From this you will see that when the roads are finished to Hilo and Punalou, and well equipped with coaches, the number will largely increase, perhaps to 200 per month.

Ben Hogan at the Y. M. C. A.

Ben Hogan gave a capital lecture to a full house Thursday evening on the training of athletes. He was of course thoroughly acquainted with his subject and handled it in a really spirited and interesting way. He made a number of good hits which always provoked a laugh and sometimes brought down the house. His lecture contained a great deal of sound and sensible advice which both sexes would do well to follow. If the young men of Honolula would only take a little of the healthy exercise which Ben Hogan recommends, they would not I ve in barbarous ignorance of the beauty and charm of the mountains which lie unvisited almost at the gates of this city.

The stereopticon lecture delivered by Ben Hogan Saturday night was all that had been promised for it. It attracted a full house and was a great success. Mr. Hogan will speak to-morrow night, as usual, at Consul-General of Portugal; Major J. into the Mausoleum to the strains of soft | the Y.M.C.A. There will be a choir and Ben will be one of them.
